Smith Still Pressing Parking Scheme Test

J. DONALD SMITH
. . . renewed attack

Victoria MLA J. Donald Smith will probably go ahead next week with a B.C. Supreme Court action to test the validity of Victoria's $1,000,000 off-street parking bylaw, he said yesterday.

Mr. Smith said he had been too busy in the past couple of weeks, during the legislative session, to start the action.

He gave this indication of his intentions after renewing his attack on the parking plan in a luncheon address to the Victoria Electric Club.

He claimed city council had unintentionally or otherwise misrepresented the facts in connection with the proposed parking building and mall development.

The parking facility, Mr. Smith said, would provide a net gain of 97 parking spaces at a cost of $7,000 or $8,000 each, so that it was unlikely to be self-supporting, even if it didn't cost more than expected.

Increased parking meter revenue, he said, should be used for rehabilitation of streets, and if it was used for the parking facility, the money for the streets would have to come from the ratepayers.

Off-street parking should be provided by the merchants who would benefit, he maintained.

Engineer Exchange Arranged

Arrangements have been made for exchange visits of engineers between Canada and Russia later this year, Dr. Kenneth F. Tupper, president of the Engineering Institute of Canada, said Monday.

Russian engineers are as well-trained as Canadians, he told some 80 persons attending a banquet here sponsored by the Vancouver Island branch of the institute.

Dr. Tupper, a Toronto consulting engineer, made arrangements for the exchange visits last October while he and the institute's secretary, Garnet Page of Montreal, were in Russia.

The Canadian government has given its full approval to the plan which will show the Russians "how we live and our way of life," Dr. Tupper said.
